One and Three

Look at the sun on high, which appears to be one.
But bend down and look and see its shining—a second.
Test, touch, and examine its heat—a third.
They are like one another, and not alike....
Fire and sun are single natures.
Three things are mingled within them threefold—
Substance, heat, and, third, light—
And they dwell in accord with another....
If fire's nature is such a marvel
(It begets, yet suffers no loss; it spreads evenly,
without growing cold;
Though its heat is distinct, it is not cut off from it...),
[It bears] the mystery of the Spirit—the type of the Holy Spirit....
And though they are so like one another,
[Fire] is still far different, for it cannot depict
The Trinitarian mysteries, which can never be depicted.
And if the investigation of this fire inundates us—
How can it be one? How can it be three?
How can those things that dwell within it be three?
How can its heat be divided and not cut off?—
A nature that we have received lovingly,
in a threefold manner,
Yet have not, along with it, possessed divisive debating,
How much more should we receive simply
These Three, with love that does not dispute?
Their nature does not come after us, to become like us,
For they are like each other in every way,
[While] the natures of creatures are distinct and dissimilar.
How much more distinct than all is the nature above all?
