Surrendering Our Fears to God

The great effort of prayer is to return repeatedly to the silent depths of our heart where all acts are purer.... A longing to cast ourselves completely before him and give all to him is what carries us into these depths of silent self-forgetfulness....
But the surrender of our soul only takes on a deeper reality when it enters a garden much like Gethsemane, where the night is cold and the winds cast twisting shadows among the gnarled trees. There the soul must expect no rescue but from God himself. The great need in our own Gethsemanes is to discover the prayer of Jesus being prayed secretly in our soul: Not my will, but yours, be done. This word of surrender does not come to the help of prayer as though providing an answer to solve a problem. An act of surrender may not remove a tension felt within our soul. Rather, what may happen is that a sense of his strength, of his promise to take care of everything, may pierce a mysterious depth within our soul.
The surrender to God in a brief phrase becomes suddenly, not our prayer alone, but Jesus' words to his Father spoken again from a concealed depth within our soul in that hour. This is the nature of a true spiritual fire that must invade our desire for God in prayer. Only when prayer over time carves a fire of deep surrender to God inside the deeper layers of our soul does a passion for God truly inflame our soul.
